

1/4 of the world has never met a follower of Jesus

Is God calling?

Maybe you have a nagging sense that God has something more for you, but you're not sure where you fit.

You have found your freedom and identity in Jesus. You are convinced that life and hope come from relationship with him. For you, following Jesus means living in ways that give dignity to the poor, extend care to the hurting, and offer words of truth to those seeking. You are dedicated to living as his disciple and to introducing others to Christ.

But you're not a pastor. You want a way to use your professional and work skills to show Jesus' love.

You've thought about serving Christ overseas, but are worried about power dynamics and cultural privilege. You are wary of programs that inadvertently import Western culture and elevate the worker as savior rather than Jesus.

Talk with Us

We have the same concerns. We're ordinary people—nurses, social workers, baristas, teachers—devoted to Jesus, committed to living in ways that please him. We want to see lives and communities transformed by encounter with Jesus.

We have teams throughout Asia and the Arab World. Once we know something about your skills and work history, we can look for an opportunity that can leverage those. We offer placements that last from as little as 6 weeks to as long as you want to commit. We'll help you get oriented, connect you to a team, and support all along the way.

Interserve

An international community of Christ-followers

Drawn from over 30 different countries, we serve together on multi-ethnic teams. A single team may have people from Brazil, South Korea, the US and Ethiopia all serving alongside each other.

We think that's important because we help each other overcome our cultural blind spots, and our joint community demonstrates that following Jesus transcends ethnicity or nationality. Our international office is in Malaysia and our current international director is from South India.

Working in the hard places, among people who have no one to ask about Jesus,

We are committed to inviting others to follow Jesus. We want to both grow in our understanding of what it means to live connected to Jesus and to share that life with others.

We use our professional skills in wholistic ministry. We see work and ministry as an integrated whole.

We use our skills to serve and empower marginalized people.

in Partnership
Humility
Authenticity
Integrity
Hope

Wherever possible, we ally ourselves with locally-led ministries servng alongside them with humility.

We commit to learning the language and doing the hard work to understand the local culture.

We strive to use our professional skills with authenticity and integrity, trusting that through the grace of the Holy Spirit the very character of Christ will be manifest in us.

As opportunities arise, we share the hope within us and invite others to join us in following Jesus.
